

NEW COURSE!
Summer 2024

Unequal Harvests

The Politics of Nature and Food

ANTHRCUL 298

Instructor:
Kimberly Sanchez

◎ SECTION 201 ◎ M/W 10-1 ◎ CLASS #73167 ◎

When and where did our relations with cultivated environments begin? What are the crucial elements of our modern food system and how are they connected to colonialism and climate change? Who benefits from alternative food movements such as the push for organic foods, and what might the future of food production look like?

This course explores the cultural differences and social inequalities which permeate foodways. From visiting a local farm to examining archaeological artifacts, students are provided interactive opportunities that bring to life course concepts and ideas.

3 credits

Counts toward Anthropology major, minor or LSA social science distribution.

M | ANTHROPOLOGY

